On May 25, 2020, Takihyo Co., Ltd. announced that it changed its full-year FY02/21 forecast to undetermined.

As of April 14, 2020, the company targeted sales of JPY60.0bn, operating profit of JPY100.0mn, recurring profit of JPY200mn, and net income of JPY70mn for FY02/21. However, the company temporarily withdrew the forecast, leaving it undetermined. As a result of the government's emergency declaration following the spread of the novel coronavirus, many customer stores have closed or shortened operating hours. Since then, the state of emergency has been gradually lifted, but the outlook for recovery in consumer spending is still unclear, and customers are still extremely cautious about ordering. The company decided to leave its forecast undetermined due to the increased difficulty in estimating the impact from the spread of the novel coronavirus infection. Once the impact of the pandemic is known, the company plans to release a revised FY02/21 forecast. The annual dividend forecast for FY02/21 remains unchanged at JPY40.0 per share.
